TRAVELTIP

If you are going to leave your car in long-term parking, you should not leave the registration and insurance cards, your GPS or your remote garage door opener in the car. If thieves get into your car, they will have the information to find your home and enter without breaking in. If you have a GPS, don't put your home address in it. Use a nearby address like a store or gas station so no one else will know where you live if your GPS is stolen.
